

Ways to Include SWE in your Estate Plan

First, all designations for SWE in estate plans should be designated one of two ways: SWE or SWE-EFI.

- SWE (Society of Women Engineers) manages traditional donations for programmatic operations and non-endowed scholarships. Gifts to SWE funds may support a designated area, or they may be unrestricted so they are used where the need is greatest.
- SWE - EFI (Society of Women Engineers - Endowment Fund Incorporated) manages all endowed scholarships. When an endowed fund is established, the principal is generally maintained, and the investment earnings are used to grant yearly awards which means an endowment can last indefinitely.

Estate plans should include the legal name of the Society fund, EIN, contact information and address. The Society of Women Engineers and its Endowment Fund are qualified under U.S. Internal Revenue Code 501(c)(3) and are eligible to receive tax-deductible contributions in the United States. For other countries, please check with your local tax advisor regarding tax deductions of charitable contributions. Please use the information provided below.

Making a gift to SWE/SWE-EFI from your Retirement account:

The easiest way to make a planned gift to SWE or SWE-EFI is through your retirement assets - 401(k), 403 (b), IRA, etc. If these funds are designated to a beneficiary that is not your spouse they will be subject to estate tax and the recipients will have to pay income tax as they withdraw the funds. To avoid these tax implications, you can make SWE or SWE-EFI a beneficiary of your retirement plan. Since SWE and SWE-EFI are a tax exempt organizations there will be no income tax due upon distribution.

Making SWE or SWE-EFI the beneficiary of any or all of your retirement accounts is simple. The process requires you to you contact your plan administrator and request, fill out, and submit a form to change your beneficiary designations. You can make SWE or SWE-EFI a primary or a contingent beneficiary. Contingent beneficiaries will receive the funds if the primary beneficiary, (most often your spouse) passes away before you.
